It's dedicated to Marlon Brando - the star of this edition's retrospective - the poster of the 42nd Turin Film Festival, directed for the first time by Giulio Base.

"Among the many, many images of Marlon Brando, I find that this one best represents this edition of the Torino Film Festival," points out Giulio Base. It's one of the rare photos in which he looks directly into the camera, not for stage reasons but to seek complicity, smiling slyly at you, straightening his tie, seducing you. It's a shot you don't expect: Brando is of unparalleled beauty, bathed in a Parisian light that looks so much like Turin, to remind everyone that there's a festival waiting for them, there's him waiting for them."

The photo was taken in 1972 in Paris during the filming of "Last Tango in Paris".
